

Euclid scenic route plan gets approval

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

Aspirations for a scenic highway and economic considerations clashed again Thursday night, but after nearly five hours the Upland Planning Commission approved a series of land-use guidelines for Euclid Avenue.

The commission recommended a general plan amendment and zone change affecting future use of portions of Euclid from Foothill Boulevard south.

In all, commissioners took a block-by-block look at 10 areas in both the general plan amendment and zone change.

But much of the discussion Thursday night, and on into this morning, centered on the third aspect of the city's Euclid Avenue study.

The commission approved a text amendment to the municipal code that would establish a scenic corridor overlay zone for all property within 250 feet of the center of Euclid.

The city council will consider the commission's recommendations on June 18.

Planning Director Bill Young described the text amendment as the "heart of the documentation and the implementing tool for the scenic route zone of the general plan."

"It is a philosophy more than anything else, and many of the actions of the commission and the council will be now to provide guidance as to whether or not Euclid Avenue is a special scenic route of the city and deserves special protection and opportunities for enhancement and preservation," Young said.

Concern over the potential for converting residential property to commercial use under current standards prompted the study and a moratorium on most applications for new development from last October to the end of May.

Euclid in Upland and Ontario has been found eligible for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places, and the street is one of four designated scenic routes in Upland.

The so-called "overlay zone" would not change zoning for particular Euclid properties, but would set up special standards governing future use.

The text amendment commissioners reviewed Thursday night was the third draft, but representatives of the Upland Chamber of Commerce and the Ontario-Upland-Chino Board of Realtors pointed out several provisions they believe are still too restrictive on permitting commercial uses.

However, in casting the lone vote against the text amendment, Commissioner Al Canestro strongly expressed an opposite view.

With a possible few exceptions, Canestro said, "I think that we should once and for all state that 'no, we're not going to convert the residential structures on Euclid Avenue to commercial uses.'"

He said the scenic corridor zone as drafted would create an "unsightly situation" with a "hodge-podge" of uses and that provisions requiring conditional-use permits provide inadequate protection.

"I don't think it's good planning. I don't think Euclid Avenue deserves it."

Commissioner Tom Harris disagreed, saying, "The value of these properties is at the point where it is impossible to rent these houses and maintain them satisfactorily."

"And the only way you're going to accomplish that is by allowing some of these conversions and hoping that people will maintain them" aesthetically instead of the structures deteriorating.

Canestro responded, "The exception has become the rule.... As soon as a property owner finds out that his two-bedroom house that's getting $200 or $300 a month rent can have $600 a month as a commercial use, all of a sudden it's no longer feasible to have a residential structure on this property."

$10.19 million total for tentative budget

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The Upland school board Tuesday night approved a $10.19 million tentative budget — adding more than $97,000 to reserves than expected last month — for the coming fiscal year.

Trustees also modified a recent boundary change giving a maximum of 19 sixth-graders the option of attending either of the district's two junior high schools this fall and authorized a pilot breakfast program serving four schools.

Superintendent George Renworth told the board income estimates overall for 1979-80 have increased $114,153 since the preliminary budget was approved May 22.

The biggest change assumes full funding through the county on a formula for special education under the West End master plan. The estimate on income from the county increased $132,278.

Other revisions for district income and expenditures — including employment of 11 aides in the resource specialist program and two more bus drivers — left the district with $97,668 to appropriate for contingencies, bringing those reserves to $665,740.

In all, the district now expects revenue to climb $566,275, or 5.6 percent, over the estimate for the current year.

Renworth cautioned that this increase is still pegged to a 7 percent growth in state funding based on average daily attendance.

Little else changed since the board reviewed the preliminary budget and the next step in the review will be consideration of a publication budget July 17.

Following Renworth's recommendation, trustees gave current sixth-graders living in a small area between Foothill Boulevard and 16th Street west of Mountain Avenue an option on which of the district's junior highs they will attend this fall.

The superintendent said a maximum of 19 students and their parents would have a one-time choice on whether to continue schooling at Pioneer or Upland junior highs.

Residents had objected to a boundary change in April that would have sent their children to Upland Junior High instead of Pioneer.

Renworth said giving students and parents an option would have no effect on staff assignments. He also noted residents said he learned of the boundary change after the fact and, through a mix-up, their children were registered at both junior highs.

Sister City group

Banquet set for Australian

Ken Wright of Mildura, Australia, a member of Parliament representing the North West Province of Melbourne, will be visiting Upland on June 20 and 21.

On June 21, a banquet will be given in his honor by the Upland Sister City Association at the Miramonte Room of the Uplander Motor Hotel in Upland.

Wright was mayor of Mildura in 1969 when Upland and Mildura affiliated as Sister Cities.

Upland Mayor pro tem John McCarthy will attend the banquet to represent Mayor George Gibson who is vacationing in England. McCarthy has served as the official liaison between the Upland City Council and the Sister City Association during his years as a council member.

Providing the entertainment will be Los Tres Caballeros, a group of mariachi musicians.

Reservations are required and tickets are available by calling Zelda Stone, banquet chairman, at 982-1369 or at the Upland Travel Bureau, 247 N. Second Ave., Upland, by Friday.

The social hour will start at 6:30 p.m. with dinner at 7.

Ken Wright of Mildura, Australia, left, now a member of Parliament for Melbourne, and Kaye Gambetta, Mildura's present mayor, look at a plaque given to Wright from Upland, Mildura's Sister City. Wright will be in Upland June 20 and 21 and a banquet is planned in his honor.

Motorcyclist hurt

An Ontario man was injured Tuesday afternoon when he lost control of his motorcycle and was thrown against a large rock.

Donald Swanson, 21, was reported in stable condition Wednesday morning at San Bernardino County Medical Center.

According to the California Highway Patrol, Swanson was riding his motorcycle in an area off the north end of Euclid Avenue in San Antonio Heights at the time of the accident.

School given historic name

Taking a page from local history, the Central school board Tuesday night named the district's new elementary school after Dona Merced.

In selecting Dona Merced Elementary School, the board rejected numerous other suggestions, including naming the school after the late comedian, Jack Benny, or Kermit the Frog of "The Muppets Show" on television.

The school is scheduled to open this September with portable buildings at the site, the north side of Church Street between Haven and Turner avenues.

Dona Merced, born Maria Merced Williams (Dona is a Spanish title used before women's names), was an early resident of the area and with her husband, John Rains, developed the vast Rancho Cucamonga, from which the city takes its name.

The Rains House was the first school in Cucamonga and is currently a county museum. Dona Merced lived from 1849 to 1907.

Fire official criticizes skylight hazards

By PEGGY ZIEGLER
Staff Writer

Upland Fire Department officials have criticized the Chaffey Joint Union High School District for failing to take steps to prevent potentially serious accidents at Upland High School.

The criticism followed an accident at the high school Wednesday when a 16-year-old youth fell through a skylight.

The teen-ager was reportedly the third person to fall through a skylight at the school and be seriously injured in less than 18 months.

The Upland Fire Department sent a letter to the school on Jan. 22 "informing them we wanted something done," Battalion Chief Gary Edwards said Thursday.

The response of the Chaffey Joint Union High School District in a letter dated Feb. 14 stated, "... with our current financial picture it does not appear to be something that we will be able to accomplish this year." "Enough is enough," Edwards said after Wednesday's accident.

Since October 1977, he said three teen-agers have climbed onto the roof and have crashed through the skylights. He said the drop is about 15 feet onto concrete. A contributing factor, Edwards said, is the fact that the skylights are virtually indistinguishable from the roof because they are painted over.

Russell Dickinson, assistant superintendent for the school district, said when the school was built in 1954 the skylights were installed to provide light without the use of electricity. However, the skylights proved unsatisfactory because they created too much glare and excessive heat, Dickinson said. For those reasons, they were painted over, he said.

Dickinson contended it would be a "tremendous task" to replace the skylights. He said the possibility was researched at one time and the cost of a wood barrier was estimated at $22,000.

Edwards said the skylights run the length of four buildings — almost 200 feet. The accidents have occurred in different locations.

Edwards also is concerned that firemen could be easily injured if they stepped on the glass inadvertently, while fighting a fire at the school, especially in heavy smoke.

"It can be a really bad situation," he said. "We are in a hard spot now. Do we put people in that situation now that we know the danger exists?"

Edwards said the skylight situation is something that will have to be addressed in the near future by the school district.

"How many times are we going to let kids fall through the roof?" he asked. "We can't keep the kids off the roof."

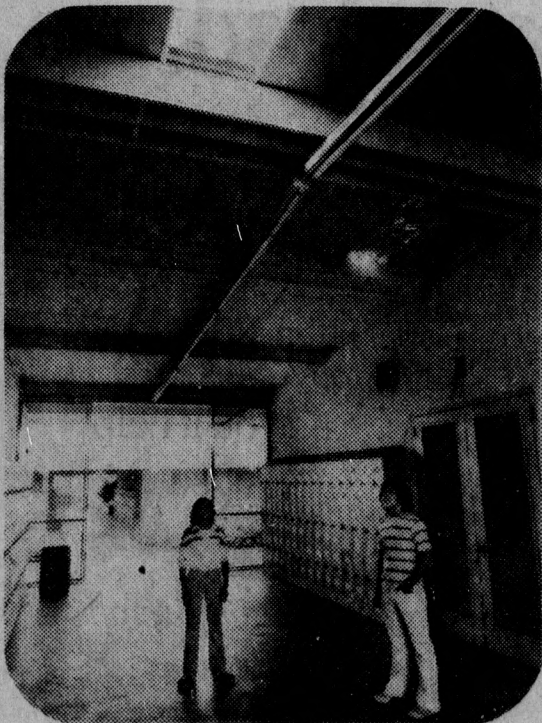

The roof is apparently easily accessible by climbing on fences or gates at the end of the buildings, Dickinson said.

The Upland Fire Department cannot force the school to rectify the problem, but Edwards said he has been in contact with the state fire marshal's office, which does have the authority to make the school district change the situation.

He said the state fire marshal can either order the change or delegate that authority to the Upland Fire Department.

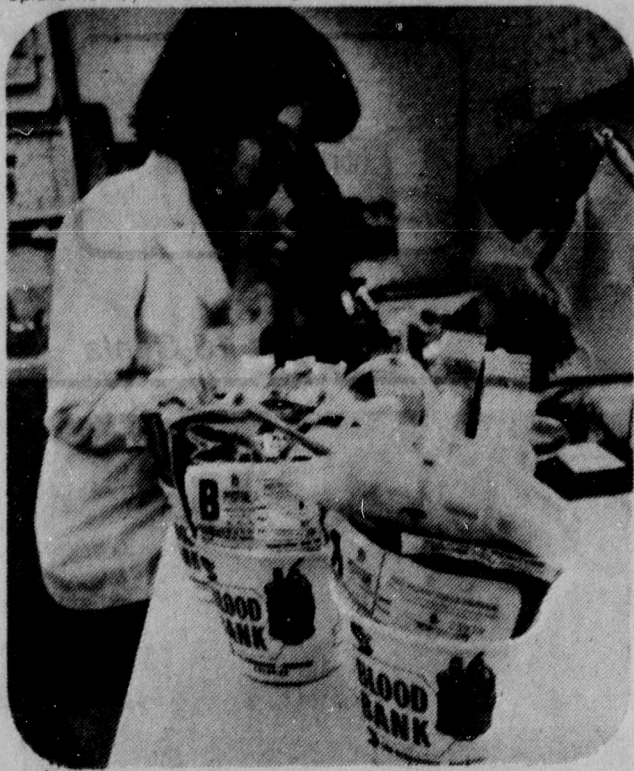

If the school district is ordered to make changes, the school will choose how to make the needed repairs, he added.

Dickinson said he understands the fire department's concern.

Blood shortage

Gas crunch causes critical decline in needed donations

By RITA BUSBY
Staff Writer

The gas shortage has created a 20 percent decrease in blood donations throughout San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

Officials at the Blood Bank of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties have called the decline "critical," especially in light of approaching summer vacations.

A normal slowdown in donations usually occurs near the end of June and runs through August — normal vacation periods — but this year the slack has begun early due to the gasoline crunch.

Dorothy Mulford, supervisor of donor recruitment for the blood bank, said the shortage deals primarily with phone solicitations.

These are calls made to regular blood donors used in emergencies and when specific needs are known in advance, such as open-heart surgery.

"Many of these donors live in Riverside, Yucaipa and Fontana and they say they just don't have the gas to get into our office in San Bernardino," Mulford said.

Regular blood drives scheduled at participating hospitals and schools are effective to a point. "But the blood mobile can't travel throughout the counties on any given day," Mulford said.

"When we know we have a heart surgery that needs 10 units of O-positive (blood type), we can't sit back and wait for a mobile unit to return from its scheduled stop hoping that it will contain the right blood."

Plus she said sometimes the mobile unit blood drives don't live up to expectations and return with perhaps one-third the amount of blood anticipated.

Acquiring enough blood during the summer months has always been a problem.

During July last year, all elective surgeries at 30 hospitals serving San Bernardino and Riverside counties had to be postponed because of a shortage of blood.

Approximately 175 units of blood are needed daily for the 30 hospitals in the two counties.

The blood bank considers a daily supply of 1,300 units adequate to keep on hand. Last July it was down to 600.

Mulford said the summer shortages affect blood banks all over the nation, but she said San Bernardino County is hit particularly hard because of all the open-heart surgery performed at St. Bernardine and Loma Linda University Medical Center hospitals.

"Patients come to Loma Linda from all over the Western states for open-heart surgery," she said.

Each open-heart surgery requires about 10 units of blood.

Replacement of blood can be earmarked for anywhere in the United States, Mulford said, and it can be given in anyone's name, but the blood given in San Bernardino County stays in the county.

With this program, one donation of blood provides complete blood protection coverage for all qualifying family members for the next 12 months.

Donors may also credit their blood donation to clubs, service organizations, churches or other individuals.

Persons donating blood should be in good health, weigh at least 110 pounds and range between the ages of 17 and 66.

Donors, 17 years old, must have parental consent.

The Blood Bank of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties is scheduled to be at San Antonio Community Hospital June 14 from 2:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

Blood donations will be taken in Aita Auditorium at the hospital, which is located at 999 San Bernardino Road in Upland.

Foothill Freeway comment urged

Responding to Caltrans' request for public comment on the Foothill Freeway's future, the Upland/Ontario office supervisor of the Automobile Club of Southern California has urged concerned citizens to pick up their pens and write.

"The public has been given until June 22 to write Caltrans about how they feel about the need to complete the Foothill Freeway," auto club Office Supervisor Ann Bird said. "This is such an important community issue that the auto club hopes citizens will take the time to write Caltrans."

Caltrans is considering rescinding the adopted Foothill Freeway route between San Dimas and San Bernardino. Completion of this freeway project has been included in regional and state transportation plans for more than 20 years, but construction has repeatedly been delayed. Caltrans now proposes to abandon the route.

"If Caltrans rescinds the adopted Foothill Freeway route, there is little hope this vital link in our regional transportation system will ever be completed," Bird warned. She cited the problems of accidents and safety hazards, energy waste and air and noise pollution.

The Upland/Ontario office supervisor urged a strong outpouring of letters from citizens to assure Caltrans considers the public's wishes for the Foothill Freeway's future before it makes a decision.

Written comments to Caltrans should be sent to J.E. Peddy, District Director, Caltrans, District 8, 247 W. Third St., San Bernardino, CA 92403.

Directory of apartments is now available

A new directory containing information on apartments in San Bernardino County has been published and is available on an annual lease basis to investors, realtors, bankers and others.

According to the author who compiled it, the new directory lists duplexes, triplexes, fourplexes and other apartment buildings in the county alphabetically by city and street.

The directory gives information such as the number of units in each apartment building and the name, mailing address and telephone number of its owner.

Author of the directory is Haim Elmaleh, who immigrated to the United States from Israel a few months ago.

Unable to find work immediately in his field, Elmaleh hit on the idea of compiling the directory and having his brother, an Upland real estate broker and general building contractor, publish it.

The directory can be leased through Realtex, an Upland realty firm. At a cost of $295 annually.

Arrangements for leasing the directory can be made by calling 985-1921.

Local students strong in word skills, weak in math

By KAREN ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Chaffey Joint Union High School sophomores appear strong in reading and writing skills but weak in mathematics, competency test results show.

The tests, which all high school students are required to pass prior to graduation, show 35.9 percent of the students who have taken the math test aren't able to pass it.

However, 93 percent passed an objective writing quiz and about 85 percent passed the reading-study skills test.

The test results were given to the school board Monday night. Notices also were mailed to parents Monday.

Students who fail the test have until their senior year to pass it. This year's sophomore class, the class of 1981, is the first that must meet the requirements of a state law on minimum competencies.

Once a student has passed the tests at any grade level, he isn't required to take them again.

Bob Erickson, assistant superintendent for instruction, said he was pleased with the overall scores.

"This first year of testing shows some signs of being better than the field testing last year," he said.

The math test may have been structured somewhat high, Erickson said, with 70 percent required to pass. "If a student missed a few questions, he was likely to fail," he said.

Ninth graders who took the test this year also passed at a higher rate than last year's ninth graders, Erickson said.

A competency task force spent the last three years developing the tests, which were given to students last month, Erickson explained. The questions were taken from a "bank" of questions developed by the Houghton-Mifflin company, which has developed a national norm (distribution of scores) for each question.

"The questions were selected on the basis of our own competency standards," Erickson said. "Therefore, there's no other test like this in the country. That's why we can't compare ourselves to other districts."

Erickson said he wanted a group of adults to take the tests to establish more realistic norms. "An Orange County district did this and was amazed how easy it was to norm the tests," he said.

Besides the math, reading and objective writing tests, Chaffey students were given a writing sample test which required them to write three paragraphs on subjects including why ninth grade students should or should not be bused to other schools.

The district must now develop programs to help students who failed the test, Erickson said. While some will pass it through maturation, others need remedial help in the form of special classes or tutoring, he said. No budget allotment has yet been made for this purpose.

1979-80 campaign

United Way names drive head

Jim Murphy of Claremont has been named campaign chairman for the 1979-80 West End United Way fund drive by Homer F. Briggs, United Way board president.

Murphy is vice president of marketing for General Dynamics, Pomona Division.

"I am looking forward to working with the many dedicated volunteers in the West End to make this 1979-80 campaign successful," Murphy said in accepting the chairmanship.

Murphy has recently returned from a five-year assignment in Europe for General Dynamics, and he calls the United Way "uniquely American."

"I am impressed with the 40 agencies that are supported by the West End United Way. They provide services necessary to the strength of our communities, and they serve everyone without discrimination," he said.

The level of United Way support for each participating agency is determined by a budget and allocation committee of 25 local men and women. The committee makes its recommendations to the board of directors only after reviewing participating agencies' operations and examining their budget requests.

"No one outside the community controls the West End United Way," Murphy said, "and this makes local volunteer involvement even more critical to its success. The United Way is today's way for neighbors to help each other in the community. Without our contributions and the efforts of the volunteer who staff its affiliated health, community service and youth programs, many people would have no place to go for neighborly help when needed.

"United Way helps neighbors help each other," the campaign chairman said.

Murphy recently attend a state-wide workshop in Monterey for United Way campaign chairmen. He previously had worked with United Way campaigns through the combined federal campaign during his service in the U.S. Navy.

College gets gift

Chaffey College's aeronautics department has received a donation of $300 from the Pomona Valley Pilots Association to aid in installing a Transponder in Chaffey's Cessna 150 airplane, according to instructor Chuck Stark.

The Transponder is used in conjunction with radar to produce a larger image and better contact with the ground control on the FAA Air Traffic Controls Radar Scanner. The Transponder increases the safety of both the students and flight instructors and is used as an instructional aid in pilot training.

The Pomona Valley Pilots Association annually sponsors two $125 scholarships for the purchase of tools or flight time.

Business seminars

The office of continuing education at Cal Poly Pomona is offering two one-day business seminars this summer at the Kellogg West Center for Continuing Education.

Telephone effectiveness workshop, Tuesday, July 10, 9 a.m.-4 p.m., examines how the telephone may be used more effectively as a business communication tool.

Designed for office-workers, salespersons, and managers, the seminar offers a practical approach to identifying problems in telephone practices and overcoming such problems through workable, step-by-step procedures. Participants learn to control conversations, maximize information gathering, resolve conflicts, and open and close sales calls.

Instructor is Dr. Gary Goodman of DePaul University. Fee of $55 (non-credit) includes luncheon, refreshment breaks, and parking.

Stress and time: managing energy and personal resources will be held on Wednesday, July 18, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.

Taught by Dr. Stephen Iman, Cal Poly faculty, this workshop is designed to sharpen awareness of chronic and acute sources of stress in home and professional life, and to recognize the factors which tax the individual's abilities to respond and adapt successfully.

Participants learn the skills needed to control tension in spite of external pressures. Special attention is given to commonly encountered stress in business and personal life, including attitudes to time and strategies for its positive management.

Fee is $65 for this non-credit seminar which includes lunch, refreshment breaks and parking.

For more details call 598-4391.

Nuclear power, nuclear safety

The office of continuing education at Cal Poly Pomona announces a new and timely examination of nuclear power generation with the course, nuclear power and nuclear safety: fact or fantasy? on Mondays and Wednesdays, 7-9 p.m., June 18 through July 23.

The course will examine nuclear power generation, the fission process, reactor controls and transport safety. Discussions cover radiation detection, health and environmental safety, and radiation effects.

This two-unit course is taught by Henry Gerardo, Cal Poly faculty. Fee is $50.

These scenes could be from any ocean marina catering to sailboat enthusiasts, but are actually of a typical weekend at Puddingstone Dam in San Dimas. Sailboat lovers gather at Frank G. Bonelli Park for the stiff breezes and a chance to get away from it all not too far away from home. Puddingstone has become a popular gathering spot for sailboaters to practice their skill, or lack of it, and have enough room not to run into anybody.

Wind provides the fun at Frank Bonelli Park

To the untrained observer a sailboat is a sailboat, but there are differences. The precariously tipped craft is a catamaran as are the others shown here. Weekends at Puddingstone Dam in San Dimas bring out all types of boating craft ranging from fancy sailboats to speed boats towing skiers to fishing boats to row boats. Whatever a person's preference it can be found at this popular resort spot. Picnic facilities are available on the shore.

Filmgoers throw themselves into The Rocky Horror Picture Show

By KAREN ALTMAN
Staff Writer

At 11:15 p.m., the line outside the Montclair Triplex theater had just begun to form. Clusters of moviegoers, most in their late teens and early 20s, talked and giggled and waited for midnight.

The attraction was a screening of "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," now in its fifth week in Montclair. The film is shown at midnight Friday and Saturday.

The R-rated musical stars Tim Curry as Frank N. Furter, a "sweet transvestite from transsexual Transylvania" who unveils the blond Adonis he's created to a pair of innocents who wander into his castle one stormy night.

The Montclair Triplex has contracted to show the movie for six weeks, said manager Jim Conley, but may keep it longer if it continues to be successful.

Judging from the reaction of the audience, it will be.

"It's the only movie you can yell and scream at," said Ken Chapman, 20, of Ontario.

Chapman had seen the film four times. His friend, Brad Moore, 21, of Ontario had seen it nine times before.

"You can get real rowdy," grinned Moore, holding up a paper bag containing a box of rice, a cigarette lighter, a slice of toast and a pack of playing cards.

The rice is tossed during the film's opening wedding scene, Moore explained. The rest of the props come later.

Amy Warner, 16, of Upland also came prepared. Her canvas purse bulged with eight pounds of white rice.

"I saw it two weeks ago, and boy was I surprised," she said. "I brought a couple friends along this time."

Valerie Bock, 17, of Claremont said she'd seen the movie 10 times at a Covina theater.

"Every time I go with a friend who's never seen it before," she said. "I love their reactions."

A 25-year-old Cal Poly student, who declined to give her name, said she was there for a class project.

"I'm a psychology major taking participant observation," she said. "I'll use this in my class if I don't go to sleep."

Vivian Collins, 30, of Claremont was proof that not only teen-agers enjoy the film.

"This will be the 14th time I've seen it," she said. "The people are interesting and you see something new every time. I go every Friday night, sometimes both Friday and Saturday. I can sing all the songs."

Rocky Horror "cultists" often dress up like characters in the film. This Friday night, only two fans were in costume — Chris Baldwin, 18, of Chino as Frank N. Furter, and Jeff Sargent, 17, of Chino as a "conventioneer."

Baldwin wore bright red lipstick, white paste makeup, a large pearl necklace identical to the film character's (It's my mother's," Baldwin said), a leather jacket and a red sweater.

Sargent sported wrap-around sunglasses, a houndstooth sports jacket, a checked vest, a striped tie and a Boy Scout belt.

"The movie relieves a lot of pressure. It takes your mind off things," said Baldwin as he plunked down $3 for a ticket.

Inside the theater, manager Conley and assistants were busy handing out noisemakers to the first 50 patrons. The moviegoers streamed into the theater, where music from the film was playing — at top volume.

"The louder the better!" shouted one young man over the din.

The lights dimmed and the audience cheered. A pair of red-lipsticked lips appeared on the screen and began singing the opening song. Several people joined in.

The Cal Poly student looking for participant observation shouldn't have been disappointed. Throughout the two-hour film, the 260-member audience cheered, howled obscenities, danced and pelted one another with rice, toast, cards and water pistols.

When it was all over, Conley and his crew surveyed the littered theater. "I'm surprised the janitor hasn't quit," Conley sighed.

Auditions set for children's variety show at Peanut Gallery

The Peanut Gallery of the Gallery Theater in Ontario is under new direction.

Pam and Howard Wilson are taking over the children's theater and are having auditions for a variety show.

On Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon, the couple will be auditioning children and teen-agers from 6 to 16 years who are interested in variety acts.

Those auditioning must be prepared to sing one song and to follow a simple dance step. An accompanist will be provided. Needed are jugglers, gymnasts, singers, dancers, magicians and mimes.

The talent show is scheduled to open June 16. Performances will be held at 1 p.m. at the Gallery Theater. Further information is available by calling the Wilsons at 985-0303 after 5 p.m.

President says

Chamber saves business funds

By VONNE ROBERTSON
Staff Writer

A well-run chamber of commerce can save its members more than the cost of membership, according to the newly installed president of the Claremont Chamber of Commerce.

Realtor Jill McAllister, installed as the second woman president of the 300-member group at a Friday dinner meeting, believes membership in the local chamber has several advantages.

"Our major accomplishment this year was defeating an advertising plan attempted by the telephone company which would have been very expensive for small businesses," explained Mrs. McAllister.

"The telephone company planned to seek yellow page advertisements for both the major phone book and for several smaller community directories. We worked to defeat the proposal before state agencies.

"The cost of double advertising would have cost many of our local merchants who draw customers from throughout the valley more than a membership in the Chamber of Commerce," she added.

Mrs. McAllister said her major goal this year will be to encourage more active participation in the chamber by its members.

"You get as much from an organization as you personally put into it," she added.

Mrs. McAllister believes the chamber's Convention Bureau, which has virtually ceased operation since the city withdrew funding of the chamber last year, is a program which has always more than supported itself through increased revenue to the city.

She reported the chamber will attempt to gain some renewed funding from the city this year to continue operation of the bureau, possibly with funds matched by local hotels.

A realtor since 1972, Mrs. McAllister has been in the real estate field 14 years. Prior to that she worked two years as an executive secretary for a Pomona designer. She has been active in the past in the Claremont Junior Woman's Club, serves on the board of the Curtin Raisers and is publicity chairman for the Foothill Philharmonic Committee.

She was presented the gavel of office by outgoing president Jerry Tambe. Tambe was presented plaques and awards from various civic leaders.

Also presented plaques as retiring directors were Nick Quackenbos, Sheldon G. Wellins and Arnold Wilcox.

69 grads see bright future outside prison

By STEVE STANDERFER
Staff Writer

Dressed in black caps and gowns, the 69 high school graduates didn't look much different than any other graduates. They entered in a somewhat organized fashion as the processional was played on the piano and took their seats in the first five rows of the auditorium.

But there was a difference. The setting was inside the California Youth Authority Youth Training School in Chino and the all-male graduating class consisted of young men who have been involved mostly in "sophisticated" crimes.

As the students strode onto the stage to receive their diplomas they kept their emotions under control, but it was undoubtedly a major accomplishment and an important time for many.

And although the graduates showed no emotion, parents and peers applauded, laughed and cried during the ceremony.

As she watched her son Percy cross the stage with his diploma, Mary Bacon of Duarte broke into tears. "I can't believe it...I'm so happy," said Mrs. Bacon as tears streamed down her cheeks. "I think this is the happiest time of my life," she said smiling.

Percy's sister Lenet Hawthorne and his grandparents, Sam and Dorothy Adams of Monrovia, also shared in the joy of the young man receiving his diploma as they smiled and cried along with his mother.

The ceremony was described by assistant superintendent of the facility Otis Brantley as "one of the most important phases in a person's life — reaping the rewards of achieving a goal."

Brantley told the graduates in his opening remarks that "many of you have been caught up in a failure syndrome." But he stressed the need for perseverance, saying the person who can keep picking himself up after defeats can succeed.

Peter Reeves, one of two student speakers, emphasized Brantley's remarks, saying a person can't expect someone to help him out of a "rut." A person must use self-motivation to drag himself out of a rut, Reeves said.

The 19-year-old Reeves was awarded a plaque for achieving the highest marks among the graduates with a 3.3 grade point average.

Reeves will be released from the tight-security institution in a few weeks. The blond-haired youth intends to go to California State University at Long Beach where he said he wants to go into law, "believe it or not."

"I knew I could always make it (graduation), but I didn't think I could make it here," said another student graduation speaker, Vernon Johnson.

Johnson said every student had support from at least one staff member in trying for his diploma or general education diploma. In particular, staff member Joseph Hillman was very supportive to him and others, Johnson said.

The 18-year-old, who worked as a remedial math aide, has plans to go to college and take up accounting when he gets out in two months.

It was the first graduation ceremony at the Youth Training School since 1974 and it was called a success by Brantley. The ceremonies had not been held for several years because "it wasn't feasible to get that many people together," Brantley said.

Cutting calories

Limit intake of foods rich in fats, sugars, starches

By LINDA BERGSTEDT
Panorama Editor

Overweight is unhealthy. Everyone knows this fact, but doing something about it sometimes seems an insurmountable task.

Many people will protest, "I don't eat that much," and feel frustrated when the scale indicates otherwise.

Some foods are more fattening than others, but overall, experts agree, to lose weight, you simply must cut calories.

Is there an easy way to cut calories?

Yes, says the Division of Agricultural Sciences of the University of California. Limit your intake of foods rich in fats, sugars and starches.

"Remember 1 ounce of protein or carbohydrate yields about 115 calories while 1 ounce of fat gives around 255 calories," said Mary Roberts Marshall, home adviser for UC Agricultural Extension Service in San Bernardino County. "Limit foods with high amounts of fat and use as little fat as possible in cooking and serving," she said.

Mrs. Marshall suggested beginning a low-calorie regime with the planning of meals and the types of foods selected in the supermarket, remembering to include the necessary nutrients in your daily meal plan.

A well-balanced diet should include items from the four basic food groups — milk and milk products such as cheese and ice cream; meats, including poultry and eggs, fish and shellfish and alternates such as dry beans or peas, lentils and nuts; the vegetable-fruit group such as citrus, tomatoes, dark green or yellow vegetables, melon and berries; and bread-cereal group, whole-grain, enriched or restored breads, cereals and other grain products.

The caloric range within each of these food groups can go from a daily total of 1,100 to 2,600 depending on the choice of foods.

"You don't need to know the calorie value of every food," Mrs. Marshall said. "Learn to choose wisely."

A chart in a publication by UC Extension shows lower-calorie choices in the four food groups versus the higher-calorie selections.

The added calories show up in whole milk, cream, cheddar or processed cheeses, ice cream sundaes, fatty cuts of beef, all pork and ham, in the preparation of vegetables and fruits (the sauces) and in the selection of fancy breads over whole-grain ones and fried crackers over saltines.

One handy bit of information Mrs. Marshall shared was that every packet of rye crisp wafers (4) is over 100 calories while 4 saltine crackers are only 50 calories.

She also offered this advice: "Remember at fast-food places, everything is fried in fat and there is no way you can lose weight and eat that way."

When selecting meat, the home adviser noted, "It is the fat on the meat that has the calories." She recommended choosing turkey franks and bologna over the higher-fat content ones.

Once you have selected lower-calorie foods, prepare them by methods which remove fat like broiling meat instead of frying it.

"Add less sugar than a recipe calls for," Mrs. Marshall said, adding there are 45 calories in 1 tablespoon of sugar. She recommended removing 2 tablespoons of sugar from a dessert recipe for cake or berry pie.

"Most of it you can take back and you won't even know the difference in the taste," she said, suggesting homemakers experiment by decreasing sugar gradually in recipes.

"Use skim or low-fat milk and you're taking out about 25 calories per cup," she said.

"Try steaming fresh vegetables and season them with lemon juice, herbs or spices," the home adviser suggested. "Eliminate butter or margarine, cream or cheese sauces as vegetable toppings."

Mrs. Marshall also advocates collecting low-calorie dressing recipes for summer salads.

"Remember every tablespoon of oil is 120 calories while 1 tablespoon of sour cream is 25 calories and 1 tablespoon of imitation sour cream is 20 calories."

In preparing various stewed dishes such as pot roast or soup, the home adviser suggested cooking the dish the day before and refrigerating it overnight. That way the fat will rise to the top and can be skimmed off.

Fresh facts

Sweet corn coming into markets

Consumers will find an abundance of good buys in their local produce departments. The variety carried by most stores is increasing as some spring favorites start production.

Vegetables

California sweet corn out of Coachella Valley is swinging into production. Quality looks good and prices are improving.

Central Arizona and Kern County have completed their lettuce production leaving Salinas and Santa Maria the main producing areas. Quality is good, but prices may advance some due to heavy demand. The soft lettuces remain reasonable and plentiful.

Zucchini, summer and yellow squash are all good consumer buys this week with prices low and quality good. Artichokes are another reasonable vegetable now. Some of the chokes are "winter kissed" or are showing signs for frost, but this does not affect the eating quality.

Bell pepper quality remains good and prices continue steady. Cucumber prices continue strong but quality is good. Consumers might want to try the hot house variety of cucumber now since it is lower in price. Broccoli is another excellent produce buy. Prices are down and quality is good. Carrots are also a good buy and cabbage prices are improving. The situation with cauliflower remains steady.

Fruit
Tomato prices may edge downward some this week. Florida is coming in with more production while Mexico continues to ship also. Quality is good. Cherry tomato prices have also eased. It looks like the Navel orange will finish up in about another week then all supplies will switch to the Valencia. Quality is good and prices are coming down. Grapefruit is getting scarce and will probably finish up in about four weeks. Until then, look for high prices. In general, strawberry prices and quality are good. Local berries have peaked and now some have a limited shelf life.

Fresh facts

Peaches, grapes due in markets

Overall, selection and quality of most produce items is great. Consumers will find several excellent produce buys to enjoy this week.

Fruit

More spring favorites are starting to arrive on the market. As reported last week, the first peaches are available out of Arvin - Bakersfield and Coachella Valley. The fruit size is small now, but will improve. Reedley - Fresno should start their production in about a week. Prices will ease as volume increases.

Sources say Bing cherries should start this week. As always, first-of-the-season prices will be steep until volume begins. Also, grapes out of Coachella should start in about another week.

A boat load of Granny Smith apples are due to arrive this week from New Zealand. Prices are expected to be up over last year.

The tomato situation is rather steady this week with Florida, Mexico and California all offering the product. Quality continues to be a problem. An excellent tomato buy is the cherry tomato. Supplies are up and prices reasonable.

As reported last week, local strawberries are past their peak so supplies have switched to the northern areas. Prices have hit their season low and consumers can expect to see higher prices.

Avocados should be a good buy this week. Sizes are small, but the fruit is plentiful and reasonable. For melons, cantaloupe prices have weakened as supplies have increased, while a heavy demand has strengthened watermelon prices. Eating quality is good for both melons.

Essentially, Navel oranges are done for the season and supplies now switch completely over to Valencias. Coachella grapefruit is scarce with quality reported as fair at best.

In the tropical area, pineapples and mangoes are both plentiful. Pineapple prices are reasonable while mango prices have eased. Bananas remain steady. Papayas continue to be a tight item due to the crop loss and the United Airlines strike which has hampered shipments.

Vegetables

Sweet corn out of Coachella Valley is a key item this week. Production is up, ear size is good and eating quality excellent.

Consumers will find several key buys in the produce department this week. Radishes, green onions, carrots, zucchini and cabbage are all good in quality and price. Mushrooms are in better supply and quality is also good.

While iceberg lettuce prices are a bit firmer, it still remains reasonable. Quality is good out of both Salinas and Santa Maria. All the leaf lettuces are also excellent in price now making these warmer days perfect for salads.

A high demand for celery coupled with the seasonal seeding problem is causing prices to advance. Supplies will switch over the Lompoc area in about two weeks which should ease the problem.

Bell pepper prices remain steady which is high. Mexican supplies are light while those from Coachella are showing signs of wind burn. Eggplant has weakened in price and quality is fair. Both broccoli and cauliflower have eased some in price. Broccoli is showing signs of heat making quality only fair.

Artichoke prices remain fairly steady but supplies are beginning to slow down. The potato market continues steady along with brown onions. The sweet, red onion is now available.

Dangers of salt outlined

Through the ages salt has been held in high esteem by most civilizations. Wars have been fought over salt. Debts have been paid with it. Now there is evidence that some salt lovers should lower their esteem for this glistening mineral, according to the California Dietetic Association (CDA).

Salt, the need for it in our daily diet, the amount needed and the potential dangers of its overuse, is the subject of a booklet, "Straight Talk About Diet, Health and Salt," published recently by the Los Angeles District of the CDA.

"People with high blood pressure, and there are more than 33 million such people in the United States, are invariably told by their physicians to curtail their use of salt," says Mary Jo Feeney, RD, and president of CDA. "This booklet provides some easy - to - follow tips for cutting down on salt consumption, if necessary, without feeling deprived."

"Just being aware that restaurant foods are usually routinely salted, for example, can dissuade a diner from reaching for the salt shaker," she adds.

In addition, reading the labels to learn the sodium content of processed foods, and tips on the use of herbs and spices as substitutes for salt, also are included in the booklet.

The booklet is one of a three - part series, "Triple Trouble: Straight Talk About Sugar, Salt and Fat," that stresses the intelligent use of the three substances in the context of a balanced diet based on the four food groups — milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, breads and cereals.

Written by Sharon Young and Peggy Biltz, registered dietitians and members of CDA, Los Angeles District, copies of "Triple Trouble," priced at $8.25 a set or $2.75 for each booklet, may be purchased by sending a check or money order to the Los Angeles District of the CDA, PO Box 3506, Santa Monica, Calif. 90403.

CMC chancellor

'Retired' president rejects rocking chair

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

Surrounded by some 2,300 books in his Claremont Men's College office, George C.S. Benson works on a book about business ethics in the United States.

Benson has recently been named

CMC's first chancellor and also holds the prestigious honor of being the college's first president.

Benson said he isn't just sure what being a chancellor is supposed to mean, but a colleague said, "It's the highest honor that can be bestowed."

The dictionary describes a chancellor as — "chief administrative officer in certain American universities."

But George C.S. Benson officially retired from CMC as president after holding the position for 33 years. Not being a man to retire to a rocking chair, Benson went to Washington, D.C. to be assistant deputy secretary of defense. His work was in education centering on the ROTC program.

"I had been in World War II," Benson said, "and having been a college president, I knew about the ROTC. This was when the ROTC was under attack — I think I was quite useful in the job."

Benson returned to CMC in 1972 to be a faculty member, director of Salvation Center, and hold the title of president emeritus. Since returning, the scholar has been teaching political science and writing.

During his academic career, he has seven published books dealing with political corruption, low quality of America's ethics, the politics of urbanism and the civil service in Massachusetts.

The chancellor has deep connections with Massachusetts Puritan ancestors who landed there in the early 1600s.

"My sister took me to a cemetery in Stockbridge," Benson said, "and showed me stones of ancestors — names I never heard of before."

Benson's grandfather, Charles B. Sumner, was one of the founders of Pomona College, and the chancellor followed family tradition by being one of the CMC founders in 1946.

"CMC started with less money on hand than grandfather had when they started Pomona College in 1887," Benson said. Currently, one of Benson's responsibilities is being chairman of Project 80, an $18.4 million fund-raising drive for CMC. He said to date, around $13-plus million has been raised, and $9.8 million is earmarked for endowment.

Benson does devote some of his time to keeping fit.

"I jog two or three times a week," Benson said. He also is a mountain climber.

"I've climbed every peak in this San Gabriel range quite a few times," he said with a sweep of his arm. He has climbed the north (back) side of Mt. Baldy leaving from Wrightwood. "This is not for the novice," said Benson, who has made this hike several times by himself.

Benson takes pride in his family — his wife Mabel "Mabs" Gibberd Benson, and sons, Sumner and Brian, both in Virginia, and a two-year old grandson he thinks is "very smart for his age."

The CMC chancellor is a graduate of Pomona College and earned his master's degree at the University of Illinois and another at Harvard University. He earned his doctorate at Harvard and his LL.D. at CMC.

Before coming to CMC, Benson was an instructor at Harvard, lecturer at the University of Chicago, associate professor at the University of Michigan and professor of political science at Northwestern University.

He has belonged to or directed numerous scholarly and civic organizations and as the son of an Episcopal priest, has been active in his church. He has been involved in political campaigns and has been "on too many boards."

On the wall space not taken up with bookshelves and on the walls of his secretary's office are plaques and certificates — "When you've been president of a college or been head of something, they give you plaques — I don't have wall space for all of them," Benson said.

Energy seminar to be held at U. of La Verne

More than 100 scientists from across the nation will meet at the University of La Verne June 21-22 to discuss "The Nation's Energy Future, Energy Through Bioconversion."

The seminar is being sponsored by the National Consumer Research Institute, the U.S. Department of Energy, the State of California, Jet Propulsion Laboratory, the California Institute of Technology and ULV.

Speakers will include Dr. Nello Del Gobo, U.S. Department of Energy, Biomass Energy Branch, "Thermo Chemical Conversion;" Dr. J.M. Spurlock and Dr. J.L. Birchfield, the Georgia Institute of Technology, "Role of Biomass in 1980-2000;" Dr. Jerry L. Jones, Environmental and Bio-Chemical Group, Stanford Research Institute, International, "Economic Analysis of Alcohol Fuels;" Dr. Richard De Zeeuw, California Energy Commission, "Biomass Energy Programs in California;" Charles A. Ballard, senior vice president, Dillon Reed Co., "Economics of Biomass Energy;" Dr. Karel Grohmann, Jet Propulsion Laboratory, California Institute of Technology, "Potential of Genetic Engineering in Biomass Production and Conversion;" Dr. Thomas B. Reed, Solar Energy Research Institute, Bio-Chemical Engineering Branch, "Biomass Energy — A Two-Edged Sword;" Dr. Fred Schooley, Stanford Research Institute, International, "Department of Energy Mission Analysis of Fuels from Biomass;" and Dave Gibson, Esquire Tax Council Crown Zellerbach, "Tax Considerations and Financial Incentives for Biomass and Alternative Energy Production."

"Energy Through Bioconversion" is one of a series of energy programs covering a broad range of topics sponsored by the National Research Institute, along with other organizations. Biomass is the use of any biological material — from corn cobs to garbage to human wastes — that can be converted into usable energy, says Dr. Robert Neher, ULV professor of biology who will co-chair the seminar with Dr. Richard Green, director of energy at Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Biomass offers several options for meeting future fuel, chemical and food requirements — utilization of urban and industry wastes as a supplement fuel in coal and oil-fired boilers and as a feedstock for producing methane and liquid fuels such as methanol; utilization of agricultural and forest residues to produce fuels, fertilizers and chemical feedstocks; growth of plant biomass and development of ocean farming and converting growth to fuels, chemicals and food.

Lowly guayule eyed as a source of rubber

By RITA BUSBY
Staff Writer

A plant that produces rubber under stress may save the day for the nation's tire industry which now relies on oil based synthetic rubber and natural rubber provided from rubber trees in Southeast Asia — both uncertain sources of supply.

The concept isn't new — during World War II thousands of acres of the guayule plant, which produces rubber, were under cultivation — 30,000 acres of it in the Salinas Valley.

Near the end of the war the plants were torched with the knowledge that petroleum was once again plentiful and that a large supply of rubber would be forthcoming from rubber-producing countries.

Now, however, the lowly guayule plant, which produces rubber in lazy fashion unless subjected to stressful conditions, such as not quite enough water, is about to take a bow.

Several universities and colleges, including Cal Poly Pomona, are now involved in studies related to the plant. And at least one rubber company, Goodyear, is also conducting studies.

A factory in Northern Mexico has been producing rubber from the plant for several years and another is to be built in Arizona, where guayule is native to the soil.

Margarita Engle, an instructor at Cal Poly who is doing graduate research on the guayule plant, believes there is a good chance that within the next few years it will be grown commercially for major industries, especially in the southwestern section of the country where conditions for growing the plant are best.

Most of the nation's rubber (75 percent) is produced from petroleum, with the other 25 percent coming from portions of Asia which aren't considered a secure source anymore, according to Engle.

Many rubber goods are currently produced from synthetic elastomers and are superior to natural rubber for some uses, but inferior in many instances.

Natural rubber is still in wide use as a major component of the automobile tire and is especially needed in large commercial tires because of the resiliency it offers. All tires require a certain amount of rubber.

In 1942 the first automobile tire made entirely of rubber from the guayule was produced.

But production never grew much beyond the experimental stage.

All parts of the shrub contain rubber, that, when purified, is indistinguishable from natural rubber from Hevea trees (commonly referred to as rubber trees).

The rubber is contained within cells throughout the plant, which is eventually harvested and ground up for its latex, which is extracted (or separated).

The roots and stems of the plant are particularly rich in the rubbery substance.

Yields of up to 12 percent (dry weight) have been obtained from the wild plant and more than 20 percent yields have come from improved varieties.

The guayule shrubs may live as long as 50 years and reproduce through unipollinated seeds.

Engle said the main objective of her studies, and several other studies being conducted, is to develop a faster-growing and higher-yielding plant.

She said irrigation plays a major role in how much rubber the plant produces.

"When plants get a lot of water they get big but give very little rubber — the rubber is formed under stress," said.

"We have to know just when to cut the water off so the rubber production will be increased," she said.

It takes about four years for a guayule to mature.

The federal government has recently passed legislation supporting research on guayule and Engle has just completed a grant proposal to assist her with the guayule project.

"It could become a really big industry in the southwest," she said.

An international conference concerned with the guayule is scheduled next year in Los Angeles.

In the early 1940s, 30 countries, including Spain and Turkey, embarked on large-scale programs to produce plants, but no commercial production nor wide use of the guayule exists today.

During the early 1960s, the installation rate for air conditioners in automobiles was less than 10 percent.

In 1979, more than 80 percent of all new cars will be purchased with factory-installed air conditioning.

The guayule plant, almost forgotten after a hasty debut during World War II when rubber was scarce, may get another shot at showing its ability to produce rubber and alleviate coming shortages of the substance due to oil shortages and unrest in Southeast Asia, prime sources of

Illinois man named as new administrator

Dr. Paul F. Weller has been appointed vice president for academic affairs by Cal Poly Pomona President Hugh O. La Bounty, Jr. Weller's appointment will be effective July 1.

Weller comes to Cal Poly from his post as dean of arts and sciences and professor of chemistry at Western Illinois University (WIU), Macomb, Ill.

Weller was appointed as WIU's dean of arts and sciences in 1975. The WIU College of Arts and Sciences has about 4,000 student majors and 330 faculty located in 15 departments. In total, Western serves approximately 13,000 students through the master's degree level. The university is composed of six colleges, with more than 730 faculty members, and a graduate school.

Weller began his career in 1961 as a research chemist for IBM in Yorktown Heights, New York. In 1965 he entered the educational field as assistant professor of chemistry at the State University of New York (SUNY), and remained there until 1975. During his tenure at SUNY, he spent 1971-72 in Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, and at the University of New England, Armidale, New South Wales, Australia, during a sabbatical leave. In 1974, he became chairman of the department of chemistry, and that same year received the SUNY Chancellor's Award for Teaching Excellence.

Weller received his B.S. from the University of Illinois in 1957, with honors and distinction in chemistry, and his Ph.D. from Cornell University in 1962. He is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Sigma Xi, the American Chemical Society and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Still rolling along

One roller skate is better than none to Malita Tyler, 9, of Chino. Malita outgrew her own roller skates and gave them away, leaving her without a set. Malita and her friend, Robin Swanson, 8, still like to skate together so they share Robin's pair, with each girl wearing one skate. Roller skating has become one of Malita's favorite activities so she borrows both skates from Robin whenever the 8-year-old isn't using them. (Staff photo by H. Lorren Au Jr.)

Mother-Daughter Workshop slated

A Mother-Daughter Workshop, which attracted large numbers of women when it was first offered last January at California State University, Los Angeles, will be repeated June 16 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the campus.

The day-long program is designed to help mothers and daughters deal with their generational conflicts, and to question and explore the assumptions which they have made and maintained in their roles as mothers and daughters.

Dr. Jill Steinberg, a clinical psychologist who will lead the workshop, said that mothers and daughters often have special kinds of differences which interfere with their closeness, and that the workshop will facilitate the opening of communication between the generations.

Although the workshop is especially suited for mother-daughter pairs, particularly daughters who are high school or college age, individual mothers or daughters may attend without their partners. There is a fee of $40 per couple or $25 per individual.

Reservations should be made by calling the Cal State L.A. Office of Continuing Education at (213) 224-3501. Registration should be completed by this Friday.

Bored?

You're the best person to get you out of it

By BETH MOHR
Copley News Service

Bored? The best person to get you out of it is the one who got you into it — yourself.

"When people think of escaping boredom, they usually think in terms of magic. — 'Something is going to come along and put a charge in my life.' — There is no magic. You have to do it yourself."

That is the observation of Dr. Elliot Weinstein, psychologist and marriage, family and child counselor.

One of the ironies is that the more advantages life offers, the more chances there are to be trapped by boredom.

"We now have more leisure time, more conveniences, better tools to work with," Weinstein said. "These advantages free us to seek out the many things available to us, to use our abilities in a variety of ways. The problem is that when we have a variety of opportunities, we are forced to make choices."

Making choices can be risky. It is much easier to get along if you acquiesce to others, Weinstein explained. It also robs you of self-determination.

The more you let other people make decisions for you, the more you weaken your ability to influence the things that affect your life," he said.

Once you recognize that you are at a disadvantage by relinquishing all of the decisions to others, you must make the effort to change.

"The tendency, though, is to back away and say, 'It's OK. I'll sit this one out.' And, we begin to build up a pattern of sitting it out," Weinstein said. "The stronger that pattern gets, the less power you have to change."

Weinstein describes the person who feels powerless to change as numb or neutral. That person is bored.

"It is going to take time to get feelings going."

One of the things you have to do is understand how you reached the neutral state. The itinerary could have started in childhood.

"When a child feels bored, he asks his mother what he should do," Weinstein said. "The mother figures out a task for him and he learns that somebody else will provide some sort of stimulation."

Other obstacles to a strong sense of self-determination continue to crop up through the years:

— Television lulls you into passivity.

— Asking too many provocative questions in school might annoy teachers and classmates.

— If you set challenging job goals, you stand a chance of drawing adverse criticism from associates.

— If you are a woman and display a high degree of intelligence, you may put people off.

— If you become too aggressive, you might frighten people.

— If you state your opinions too positively, people could get the idea that you are talking back.

The easy way is to retreat, insulate yourself against the possibilities of making others uncomfortable by doing nothing.

"You have to start breaking down some of the layers of insulation."

You don't have to make big changes in your life immediately.

"If in the next week, you put one new thing into your life, it will have a multiple effect," Weinstein said.

"When you do something that you enjoy, you are willing to share it with somebody else."

"By sharing, you add to the other person's knowledge and he gives information to you. Putting something new in your life tends to increase your contacts with others."

Benefits of new activities can spread to other family members.

"The husband who chooses art classes as a new thing in his life can discuss his work with his wife, be interested in her ideas, have her visit his class occasionally to see how things are done," Weinstein said.

"If the wife begins a new interest that her husband does not understand, ballet for instance, he should share it to the extent that he can."

Couples have to be careful not to blame each other when boredom creeps into relationships.

"The person who feels he is in a rut will often blame his partner," Weinstein said. "He has to recognize that boredom is his problem. It is good to let your partner know you are bored, however."

"If you don't bring it out in the open, it gets buried and becomes a landmine. All of a sudden you step on it, there is a big blowup and neither knows where the explosion came from."

American ingenuity could be on the wane with fewer patents being issued to U.S. residents in 1977 than in any other year since 1947.

Patents to non-residents rose 37 percent.

Claremont Colleges set plan to save gas

The director of the Claremont Summer Session has announced a plan to help students conserve gasoline during the summer's courses.

The session begins June 18. The director, Carolyn L. Ellner, said professors and staff will work with students to reduce the number of trips to the campus by concentrating class schedules and setting up carpools. Classes will begin as presently scheduled, but new schedules will be worked out if the students wish.

Information and catalogs may be had from the summer session office, Claremont Graduate School, Claremont, 91711 621-8070.

Psychiatry and religion can be blended, according to Dr. Rex Rook, a pioneer "integrationist" at Pomona Psychiatric Hospital.

Rook, instrumental in establishing a Christian therapy unit at the hospital, told an audience of ministers there Thursday, "What we're trying to do here is be a pioneer."

The therapy unit, separate, but integrated with the rest of the hospital, is the first of its kind in the country and was established through the efforts of Rook, a physician-turned psychiatrist.

"The psychiatric community is doubtful of Christianity," Rook declared, "but likewise the Christian community is skeptical of psychotherapy."

Rook, who aligns himself with fundamental or evangelical Christianity, which adheres to a literal translation of the Bible, said he's been met with "resistance from some of the Christian community."

He said many Christians have guilt feelings about needing psychiatric help.

"It's as though medicine makes them think they are betraying Christ by accepting another god (medicine)," he said.

Rook, who experienced a Baptist upbringing, further said that many believe if they are Christian they are free from any mental or emotional problem. He said it's simply not true.

"We always pray for those who have physical complaints. I have always wondered why we didn't pray for those who had just been put into psychiatric clinics," he said.

Rook said he first began wondering about psychotherapy and Christian concepts when he was a practicing physician, and eventually gave up his practice to study psychiatry.

His studies led him to question if such scriptural references as "Paul's (the Apostle) thorn in the flesh," which many theologians attribute to epilepsy or a speech

'Integrationist'

Doctor feels psychiatry, religion can blend

impediment, couldn't have instead been deep anxiety — that he had emotional problems that he was well aware of.

Rook further wonders if Paul's awareness of his problem prompted much of his ministry.

Likewise, Rook believes that perhaps David's persecution complex was the result of a particular mental illness.

Rook admitted he has drawn flack from both psychiatric and religious organizations for his rationales.

"Some claim we are psychologizing theology — and they are partly right," he said. "We do have to watch ourselves. We have to continually look to the Holy Spirit to keep us on the right track."

But he was warned early by a leading psychiatrist that his attempts to integrate Christian concepts with psychiatry "would grind you to powder."

Rook said once he began his studies, however, there was no turning back.

He recalled that early in his psychiatric schooling he saw a hallucinating woman tied down, "who was obviously a Christian," and "I questioned why the Lord would allow this to happen to a Christian."

He also recalled the remarks of a group of social workers who had come from the home in which a child had been abused by its mother and father. "A sign on the family's home indicated that 'the Lord is head of this house,'" he said.

"Christians definitely are not free from mental illnesses," he said.

He remembered treating a minister who suffered a nervous breakdown and who suffered almost as much from the guilt of his emotional state as from anything else.

"He believed it couldn't happen to a Christian," Rook said.

Bibles are used as an important part of therapy in the Christian therapy unit at the hospital.

Additionally, the Christian patient is offered spiritual counseling and prayer, morning devotions, Sunday worship, Bible study programs and a chaplain who serves as a liaison to the person's outside pastor.

Supportive, reproductive and reconstructive therapies are part of the program — systems talked about and used throughout the Bible, according to Richard Dickinson, a therapist at the hospital.

Dickinson said the Apostle Paul was a "reconstructionist," because of his insight and his letting "Christ go deeply into him."

A Brethren in Christ minister at the session admitted that the "stigma of therapy" is a fact of the church in dealing with individuals who may need psychiatric help.

"It's hard to realize that we as ministers can't handle everything. We're a conservative group and this is new to us."

Mary Lou Patterson, director of the Christian therapy unit, recalled that a woman evangelist who had recently been institutionalized at the facility was especially embarrassed about being there because part of her ministry had been promoting mental and physical health through Christianity.

One of the ministers said that sometimes a pastor adds guilt to a patient suffering some form of mental illness.
